Spring Instrument Returns

At Meyer Music, our goal is to ensure students have a successful experience with school music and choose to continue beyond their initial beginning years, leading to strong school programs and well-rounded, musically-literate adults.

Unfortunately there will always be some students who don't continue with school music for a variety of reasons.

In our communication with families we are ethically obligated to provide information about how to return instruments, since they are customers paying for a service.

When we don't provide clear return directions, instruments get left behind/lost in classrooms over the summer, parents make unnecessary payments, and the situation makes more work for everyone involved.

That said, we know that not every teacher handles instrument returns the same. If you have a very specific process or date in place that you would like us to take into account in our communication with your families, please let your ed rep know by 5/1.

Our communication will share:

- parents may return their instrument at school before the last day or anytime at a Meyer location
- a reminder for students to clean out their cases and place a note clearly stating their name and that it is to be returned
- the importance of keeping their instrument over the summer for practice if they plan to continue-- many customers mistakenly return in the spring only to have to start a rental again in the fall.
